TO THE VALLEYS OF DUNDA RANGES – UTTARKASHI

Introduction:

As part of the LiLA fieldwork module of the Village study, we conducted survey of village Dunda in Uttarkhand. We as a team of 14 students with one professor had the opportunity to closely observe the various forms of interactions and interventions taking place within the village and understand the impact of such interventions on the lives of the people of the village. Our journey was a great experience where we travelled for around 64 hours from Coimbatore to Dunda in Uttarkhand.

Objectives:

The main objective of the LiLA village study is:

- To get insight into the cultural realities of the rural life.
- To understand the status of women empowerment in the village.
- To understand women's contribution and the role-played by them in developing rural entrepreneurship.
- To create alcohol awareness among the students and people in that village.
- To monitor health issues and make the people aware of the active government schemes.

Problem Identification:

- There are bathrooms in all the houses but for which there is no proper drainage system.
- People are not aware of the active government schemes.
- Men consume more alcohol due to which there is no steady income generation.
- There are skilled women in the village but they don't have any idea of how to market it to the outer world.
- More number of drop outs after the High school.
- Due to many monkeys in the village, crops are getting wasted in larger quantity.
- Hemoglobin content should be 11 grams but mostly women here have it below 7 grams.

Perception about the village and the people:

Before visit:

When told about the LiLA program to us, we selected Dunda village as our LiLA destination. I thought people in Uttarkhand are not good in agriculture because of the weather. But our perception was wrong, rice and wheat were the two main crops grown over there. I thought there wouldn't be there proper roads as it is a hilly area, but the roads were perfect with also solar streetlights at some area. We thought of educating or making the children aware of the higher education and also about the social networking sites. We thought of making them aware of the organic farming and also alcohol awareness among the men. Village people would be kind enough compared to the people in urban areas.

After visit:

At present, the condition of the life of the people living in Dunda village is gloomy. The problems of the villagers are many and varied. The villagers are poor, ignorant and superstitious. The condition of village schools is not satisfactory. Moreover, the villagers don't understand the importance of education. They do not know the laws of health. There is no water shortage unless the motor, which is used to pump water from the tank, fails. Rice and wheat are the two crops grown in that village. I didn't even see any men in that village on the first day. Mostly men in Dunda village consume alcohol due to which they don't do any work instead they keep themselves busy drinking. From household work to farming, mostly women are engaged in these works. Women in Dunda village are hard working than compared to men. Malnutrition and anemic disease are the two main diseases faced by the people. But even after knowing this, people are not taking care of themselves.

Course learning:

During our stay in the village, I found that giving right information could help people to make right decision. I observed that the people of the village have the potential and skill to come up from poverty and misery but the most important thing they lack is information and knowledge about what is happening around the country. The below given is the SWOT analysis based on my stay at the Dunda village which analysis with the strength, weakness, opportunities, and threats.

Strength:
	• Land
	• Forest
	• Wool
	• Handicraft, sweater-making skill
Weakness:
	• Lack of water
	• Low saving habit
Opportunities:
	• Demand for sweaters
	• Presence of grand expo market once in a year
	• Government schemes
Threat:
	• Natural calamities
	• Entering of animals mainly monkeys

Conclusion:

We came to know various things, which perhaps were not possible without staying in the village among the rural population. My stay helped me to understand the lives of the villagers, their need and various dynamics related to it. The villagers do have its bright color, which is absent in urban areas, even in many developed cities of the country. The facts like different caste, female position in the house, and unity among the villagers are some of the positive aspects of the village. The actual needed thing in the village is the information and knowledge about their products, their value and their demand in the outside market, so that they could get appropriate return for their handwork.
